

Adam Posen is Deputy Director of the Peterson Institute for International Economics in Washington, DC, where he has been a Senior Fellow since 1997. His research covers macroeconomic and financial policies, European and Japanese political economy, and central banking issues. Dr. Posen is the author of five books, including The Euro at Five: Ready for a Global Role?; Inflation Targeting: Lessons from the International Experience (with B. Bernanke, et al); and Restoring Japan's Economic Growth; and has published a number of widely-cited studies in monetary economics and political economy. The Institute will publish his new book, Reforming a Rich Country: Germany and the future of capitalism, in 2009. Previously, he was an economist at the Federal Reserve Bank of New York (1994–97) and Okun Memorial Fellow at the Brookings Institution (1993–94), and he received his Ph.D. from Harvard University. He has been a consultant to the US Council of Economic Advisers, Departments of State and of Treasury, the European Commission, the International Monetary Fund, and to central banks and leading investors worldwide. During 2006, he was on sabbatical as Houlton-Norman Senior Fellow at the Bank of England. Dr. Posen is a frequent contributor to opinion page of the world's financial press and is a columnist for The International Economy magazine. As PIIE's Deputy Director, he oversees finances, fundraising, administration, outreach, publications, and recruitment for the Institute's $9.5 million budget and 50-person staff.
