Money Museum: Reproduction policy

The Money Museum of the Oesterreichische Nationalbank (OeNB) also provides digital images of its collection items. We are happy to supply such digital and photographic materials for exhibitions, catalogs, print media, scientific work and online publications as well as for educational purposes and movies.

Please note that, for organizational reasons, we cannot reply to private requests for images (e.g. for birthdays).

- The visual materials we provide are protected by copyright. Without the OeNB's express consent, they may not be used, reproduced, copied, saved or altered for purposes other than those previously agreed on. Without the OeNB's express consent, it is also prohibited to pass on visual materials to third parties or via commercial image databases.
- Whenever technically possible, we provide visual materials for free-of-charge use (up to an A2 format). Special images, e.g. in over-sized formats or in very high resolution, need to be produced externally. The client will bear all costs incurred for such external reproductions.
- If material provided by the Money Museum is used in print publications, the OeNB must be supplied with at least one copy of the publication. If material provided by the Money Museum is used in online publications, the OeNB must be supplied with a PDF file or at least a corresponding link to the publication.
- The image source must be cited as "Money Museum of the Oesterreichische Nationalbank."

Please note:

- Photos and artwork are protected by copyright for at least 50 years after having been made as well as 70 years after the artist's death.
- For exchangeable banknotes and coins of other countries, look up and comply with the conditions for reproduction of the issuing central banks. Münze Österreich AG is responsible for Austrian coins.
- For euro banknotes, comply with the European Central Bank's decision ECB/2013/10 of April 19, 2013.
- As a rule, a copyright-protected image may only be reproduced with the originator's written consent, except for objects the OeNB has exploitation rights for.
- If the OeNB does not have the exploitation rights, the borrowers or users must research and obtain the image rights from third parties. The borrowers or users undertake to indemnify the OeNB against all third-party claims, especially those under copyright law in relation to the use of visual materials.

You agree to adhere to these conditions for reproduction when using or publishing visual materials provided by the OeNB.
